SEMINARS, WORKSHOPS AND FILMS

Making the Most of Teaching Materials for Primary School teachers.

The first part of the seminar will provide a general look at the vast amount of materials that are now available for engaging and motivating primary school learners and how to use them to their full potential. In a very practical way it will provide teaching ideas for lesson planning, songs, videos and games for large classes.

The second part will look at various activities a teacher can do in class to get children to use the 4 Rs repeat, repair, reduce and recycle (and the teacher too) in order to communicate better in English. The latest governmental requirements of CLIL and culture studies will be dealt with too, all under the concept of the 4 Rs.

Aller au-delà de la surface des tâches et se donner pour objectif de faire acquérir des compétences.

Se donner pour objectif de faire acquérir des compétences, c'est au départ mettre l'accent sur le transfert des savoirs et des savoir-faire à des situations multiples. L'atelier se fixe pour but d'aider les enseignants à décloisonner les savoirs, accompagner les apprentissages, construire un projet pour faire acquérir des compétences dans le but d'agir.

Learning Environments - a practical approach to managing and making the most of teaching across the learning environments.

The seminar will be a hands on how, in a learner centred world, we as teachers can really make the most of the materials available to us and how best to apply them within the learning environments both at school and at home. We will talk about activity types, lesson planning and technology integration for both online and offline classrooms. By the end of the workshop the participants will be able to understand, apply and use clear indications and best practices in order to take our students confidently towards the recommend CEFR exit levels required across secondary school.

Intercultural Competence in English: what it is and how we can teach it and test it

Communication skills are the focus, ie using language in intercultural encounters to ensure the best results for all concerned. For corporate clients this means doing business well, building successful relationships and negotiating optimal outcomes to ensure on-going and future business.
